Eighty Four, PA – Pennsylvania 12th Congressional Candidate Tim Burns announced today that Johnstown businessman Louis Galliker, third generation owner of The Galliker’s Dairy Company, and Washington County Commissioner Diana Irely have joined the campaign as Co-Chairs.

“With staggering job losses, out of control spending, mounting budget deficits and massive debt, America needs new leadership and a new direction. Tim Burns grew up in Johnstown, was educated here and is a successful small businessman. He understands the needs of our region and will bring a fresh approach to Washington. I am proud to join him in his campaign to get America back on the right track,” stated Mr. Galliker.

“As a County Commissioner, I know what it takes make tough decisions to balance our budget and keep taxes low. Tim shares my commitment to reign in federal spending and focus on real policies for job growth. I look forward to helping elect Tim as our next Congressman because he will represent our interest in Washington and not Nancy Pelosi’s liberal agenda,” commented Commissioner Irely.

“I am honored that Mr. Galliker and Commissioner Irely have agreed to join my campaign as Co-Chairs. This campaign is about ending the failed way of Washington politics and bringing some fiscal discipline and common sense to Congress,” remarked Burns.
